Black Water has a computer element that, optimally, should be heard in stereo.

Black Water was created using Digital Performer 7.21. The computer and click parts are sent through a D/A converter. A stereo mix of the computer part is bussed through to the house system, while the click track is bussed through a headphone amp to each performer who is wearing a single ear bud.

If the house system is mono and not stereo, a CD can be used. The computer part is sent through to the house while the click is bussed to the performers. Please feel free to add any compression and a bit of reverb to make the computer part warm.

Black Water also has a slideshow element, which was realized on iPhoto.

Program Notes

Black Water was written in September 2010 for clarinet, piano, computer, and slideshow. It is a reaction to the rape and destruction of our environment for monetary profit. I chose the title Black Water after flying over the Gulf of Mexico in August 2010 and seeing the results of the BP or Deepwater Horizon oil spill. The water was black and shiny. It was obvious nothing could live there. It is the largest accidental marine oil spill in the history of the petroleum industry. The oil spill released about 4.9 million barrels, or 185 million gallons of crude oil. It was estimated that 53,000 barrels per day were escaping from the well just before it was capped. It is believed that the daily flow rate diminished over time, starting at about 62,000 barrels per day and decreasing as the reservoir of hydrocarbons feeding the gusher was gradually depleted. The spill has caused extensive damage to marine and wildlife habitats as well as the Gulf's fishing and tourism industries. Skimmer ships, floating containment booms, anchored barriers, sand-filled barricades along shorelines, and dispersants were used in an attempt to protect hundreds of miles of beaches, wetlands, and estuaries from the spreading oil. Scientists have also reported immense underwater plumes of dissolved oil not visible at the surface.

The term Blackwater is also associated with the Blackwater USA private military company founded in 1997 by Erik Prince and Al Clark. Blackwater USA was company whose employees committed serious abuses in Iraq, including killing civilians. Altogether, there are documented fourteen separate shooting incidents involving Blackwater forces, which resulted in the deaths of ten civilians and the wounding of seven others, not including the Nisoor Square massacre that killed seventeen civilians. A third of the shootings occurred while Blackwater forces were guarding US diplomats.

The music, as compared to the images, is somewhat happy sounding. I did this to as a reaction to how the media can take g as horrible and spin it into a "feel good" happening.
